Item 5. Other Events and Regulation FD Disclosure

On October 20, 2003 a complaint was filed in the Fourth Judicial District for the State of Tennessee Circuit Court of Cocke County against Sony Computer Entertainment America, Inc., Take-Two Interactive Software, Inc. (the "Company"), the Company's subsidiary, Rockstar Games, and Walmart, Inc. (collectively, the "Corporate Defendants"), and the father and mother and their two children of the Buckner family resident in Tennessee (collectively, the "Individual Defendants") by John and Rosemary Hamel, as next-of-kin of Aaron E. Hammel, and by Denise Deneau, Kimberly Bede and David Marc Hickman.

The plaintiffs allegations against the Corporate Defendants were that they were negligent and strictly liable, and breached an implied warranty of quality, fitness or condition as well as the Tennessee Consumer Protection Act for having designed, marketed, supplied and/or sold to the Individual Defendants an allegedly dangerous and/or unreasonably defective product, the video game, Grand Theft Auto III, that was played by the Buckner children which resulted in "copycat violence" that caused the harm to the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs are seeking to recover against all of the defendants compensatory damages aggregating $46 million and are seeking to recover against the Corporate Defendants punitive damages aggregating $200 million.

The Company believes that the claims against it are without merit and are similar to lawsuits brought and uniformly dismissed by courts in other jurisdictions. The Company intends to defend vigorously the action against it and seek a dismissal of the action.
